Merry Christmas

Dear Editor:

I would like to register a complaint about some teachers who insist on holding students only five or ten minutes for a detention. On first glance, this looks like a very trifling punishment for such a grave misdemeanor as talking in class, homework not done or (horror of horrors) talking back to a teacher. The only problem with this system of punishment is that in five or six minutes the school buses have left the school. Some people who take the bus live over two miles away. This takes about three-quarters of an hour to walk, this makes the detention over an hour which is too harsh a punishment for some thing as petty as talking in class. If punishment is to held in school after hours, the system is defeating itself, as, if the system is what it should be, people should be willing to stay in.

C.F.

EDITORS' NOTE: Probably the teachers well know this, that is why they only keep you in for five or ten minutes. It is when a teacher starts discussing as "important topic" five minutes before the end of the day, and has to finish it off is when we get peeved off.

STUDENTS' LOUNGE

Recently, there was a meeting at S.U.B. to discuss a student lounge at McNally. The turnout was .3% of the school. For those of you who are fourth year Math 10, that is a grand total of . . . um . . . 5 out of 1500. Understandably, the people that were at SUB when this meeting took place were astounded at the mobs of people all crowding into this one tiny building. Eventually, they took up one whole bench and their screams and shouts woke up a sleeping student all of five feet away.

Seriously, though it really is a disaster that more people didn't come. Granted, wasn't given much publicity, but from all the (valid) complaints that are heard about having to stand in the snow just to get a smoke and having to wear a gas masks just to pass by the above area, you'd think they'd be at least 10 or 111 out.

I for one, am very much in favor of the idea of a lounge for students. It would provide a place to smoke, study, lounge, or just talk with friends. It could be set up on a rented portable, so any noise wouldn't disturb other classes, or in an unused classroom. Just so teachers have staffrooms and university students have SUB, many high schools are beginning to set up students lounges.

A FAIRY TAIL

There once was a knight, who had, because he had jilted a wizard's daughter, a spell put on him - every time he came out of his castle a pair of yellow fingers would come down out of the sky and squish him to death. Of course, being a Liberal, he didn't believe anybody. So he went out for a ride the next day, and as he emerged from his castle, a pair of yellow fingers came out of the sky and attacked him. He barely escaped with his life. Our knight, being an intelligent chap considered his problem thoroughly. His solution was to take his pages out with him so while the fingers were trying to get through his pages, he would escape.

THE MORAL OF THE STORY IS: Let your pages do the walking through the yellow fingers.

HOWLS OF MISTLETOE

USELESS KNOWLEDGE:

Contrary to popular belief, the Tally Staff is NOT drunk! (It's hungover)

A sloth can be held under water for 40 minutes and feel only a slight discomfort afterwards. a man can be held under water for 40 minutes and feel no discomfort at all.

The population of Alberta in 1956 was 1,123,116.

In 1967, John Lennon and Paul McCartney received the Grammy Award for their single, "MICHELLE".

The native Indian population in 1966 was 224,236.

From 1964 to 1967, the Beatles set a world-wide record for selling 210,000,000 recordings. (Which beat Bing Crosby)

In Biafra, they need 1.120,000,000,000 ounces of food a week. We send them 3.150 000,000 per week!
